

Design Matters: Sustainability and the Built Environment

Friday, October 1, 2010
3:00pm - 4:30pm

Whittenberger Auditorium
Indiana Memorial Union

Reception to follow:
President's Rm. - University Club

Engage in an interactive discussion of the idea that “design matters” and exists in our everyday lives. Three Chicago design professionals will provide insight on how the built environment has been impacted with awareness and initiatives for a more sustainable world

John Rouse

Rouse is responsible for day to day operations of Contract Magazine, a leading publication in the commercial interior design and architecture industries. The magazine connects professionals and covers processes, products, projects and practice issues that set the standards in the design industry.

Carlos Martínez

As a firm-wide design lead for Gensler, a global architecture, planning, and consulting firm, Martínez has diverse experience in architecture, design, and business strategy consulting. He is adept in the creation of spaces that promote collaboration, enhance communication, and elevate productivity.

Hunter Kaiser

An Architectural & Design Manager for international furniture manufacturer Herman Miller, Kaiser leads strategic sales initiatives and is a resource for understanding field-based product solutions. A graduate of IU with degrees in Interior Design and English, he will facilitate the panel discussion.
