“Color Me _____” is a collaborative and interactive exhibition created by designers Andrew Neyer and Andy J. Miller. The exhibition consists of two basic parts: a mural composed of large black line drawings and 5.5’ giant markers. The exhibition is completed by the public during the duration of the show, using the giant markers to color the mural in like a coloring book.

The exhibition is the finished work of the public. What starts as a crisp clean graphic illustration transforms into something more like an abstract expressionist fine art painting.

The concept of this show hinges on the idea that with the right constraints and an inspiration to comfortably play, anyone can be creative and make interesting and / or beautiful artwork.
